

Visual programming tool and execution environment for developing computer software applications

Abstract

Based on software components, developing software applications can be done in a similar way of directing an opera, where each component is like a performer. Using this idea, this invention makes a visual programming tool and execution environment, which makes software development into a process of determining at when, who should do what; thus it achieves code-less programming.

2025 RELEASE UNDER E.O. 14176